To be very honest, XM is the best thing my kids have to listen to. The children radio stations are beyond kudos! Most of the local radio stations have vulgar language and do not cater to listeners under 18 years of age. On the specific topics; to put limits on what a person willfully pays for is wrong...if I can pay for satellite TV to get CNN or weather channel, why not be able to pay for satellite radio to get the same info. Most local channels don't advertise the traffic scene nor do they know the up to date weather. To remove the availability of these channels might cause disasterous to some avid business travler. I hope the FCC does not try to take away what I opted to pay for! Have a great week!
